

ABSTRACT

A system and method are described for settling transactions between supply-chain participants which greatly simplifies the accounts payable, credit, and collections processes for participants, and provides them with unique capabilities to modify terms-of trade and the resultant cash flows in a mutually beneficial fashion by managing the gap between marginal borrowing rates.